Gun Metal or dark statuary bronze is the darkest of the bronze coatings. This grey-black hue is sometimes also referred to as "German Gun Metal" for its likeness to the blueing process of that of a gun barrel.

gun metal

This is the most widely used patina finish historically. Used extensively in churches, museums and other institutions throughout the ages. A dark brown colour with deep golden tones of varying intensity.

oil-rubbed

Classic bronze is a rich medium brown with pronounced golden hues and weathered look.

Natural satin is the natural colour of bronze, a bright golden hue. The surface is prepared with a dull, sanded, grain look.

A green, very rustic finish is reflective of the large amounts of copper in the bronze alloy. This is the most difficult and costly of the finishes because of the delicate nature of the finish.
